S. 994. A bill to amend the Iran and Libya Sanctions Act of 1996 to extend authorities under that Act; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I rise today to announce the introduction of the Iran-Libya Sanctions Extension Act, which extends American sanctions against foreign companies which invest in Iran and Libya's oil sectors for 5 years.

At a time when many people in Washington are seeking to review America's sanctions policies, this bill—with its 74 original cosponsors—says that sanctions against the world's worst rogue states will remain firmly in place. I hope that President Bush will recognize the message sent by the overwhelming support for this legislation, and will put to rest the idea that the Iran-Libya Sanctions Act might expire or be weakened.

ILSA has been one of America's best weapons in our war against terrorism, because it is aimed at cutting off the flow of money that terrorist groups depend on to fund their attacks and operations.

Over the past 5 years, ILSA has effectively deterred foreign investment in Iran's oil fields: of the 55 projects for which Iran sought foreign investment, only 6 have been funded, and none have been completed.

That's what ILSA's all about: it limits the ability of Iran and Libya to reap oil profits that can be spent funding terrorism and for weapons of mass destruction.

Even with ILSA in place, Iran continues to supply upwards of $100 million to Hezbollah, Islamic Jihad and Hamas—which claimed responsibility for the suicide bombing last week in Tel Aviv that killed 20 Israeli children.

Can you imagine how much more Iran would be spending on terrorism
